1. The figure below shows a plane in object space (which starts off aligned with world space) and centered at the origin. We want to transform the plane so that it heads in the direction given by the vector, DOF (direction of flight), is centered at point P, and is not banked (meaning, it does not roll about its local Z axis). Show the transformation matrix that will properly position and orient the plane.